

Wednesday 30th January, 2019

What do HH Gardeners do when it has snowed and the ground is frozen? We talk about the garden and share stories of memories as children.

Sue's grandparents allowed her to pick marigolds and Wallflowers. She was so proud, as a four year old, toddling in with armfuls of flowers. However, Grandad's face fell as he saw how all his hyacinths had been decapitated!

For Felicity, the fresh peas were a great temptation. Margaret grew her love of allotments as a toddler accompanying her Dad to dig potatoes. Grandmole got her name from a grandchild who knew her habit of enjoying the garden.

It seems logical that happy memories are revisited as we get older. The freedom to be in the fresh air and play in the dirt is just as enjoyable as we get older.

Shining in the frosty sunshine are the bright yellow Primroses and purple Periwinkles and Violets. The pond is completely frozen over.

We still come up to check that all is going well. And it is. Nature continues to surprise and delight us, no matter what we do.

The HH Wildlife Gardeners