After a couple of mild, rain-free hours, we had to take cover and drink coffee. What a hardship!

The Daffodils in the meadow are being blown strongly. We have had to rescue others, which are being eaten by insects as they touch the ground. It is a perfect time to weed grass, while it is evident amongst emerging plants.

White-tailed Bumblebees continue to feed from the Stinking hellebore. We are pleased to see areas we have cleared allowing plants to have space to grow.

Jo has just found an amazing book offering recipes and remedies that can be made from wild flowers. Yarrow Salad looks like one she is going to try. Needless to say we have asked her to try it first!

Enjoy choosing and preparing for Spring. We look forward to seeing you soon.
