

This week we have had some welcome compliment about The Hengistbury Head Wildlife Garden. One was given after an incident with a cow chasing a swan. It's good to know that people like to spend quiet time in the garden.

A little girl watching us filling planters with soil to create a sort of piazza in the courtyard, suggested herbs would grow well there: oregano and rosemary.

Now we have a seating area in the courtyard of the Visitor Centre with Olive trees and yet to be planted, planters.

Come and enjoy a coffee and if it's a Wednesday, do come and have a chat. The garden is looking splendid.
