

GARDEN BLOG - WEDNESDAY 4TH JULY, 2018

The planters have been filled with beautiful plants from Kings Parks Nursery. The blue salvias contrasting with exotic pink Cleome are just some of the plants. Now, when you visit, you can sit amongst the olive trees and have an ice-cream, coffee or tea. We do hope for some rain to “water everything in”. All the plants are bee and insects friendly: pollinators.

In the garden, we are disappointed to see that the wheat ears, an ancient Wheat from Butser, have been pulled off. Such a shame as we were very happy that they had grown from the seed we planted. We intended using them for our next crop.

Otherwise the meadow is looking very dry. As gardeners, we are working with the weather and making decisions as to where water is most needed.

We look forward to seeing you any Wednesday morning. Just pop in to the wildlife garden between 10am and 12pm and we will be on hand to answer any questions.

The Garden Volunteers