

Wednesday 13th February 2019

The weather today is warmer than it has been and without the cold wind we have had a productive morning. The patch with onions has been weeded and red onions and peas planted. It is pleasing to see the garden looking 'tended'.

In the woodland snowdrops are flowering. There are even some double headed blooms. The Witchhazel has bright yellow blossoms, and the daffodils are promising to bloom.

Bees are making the most of the weather too. White tailed Bumblebees and Solitary Bees are sipping from the Hellebore. We are trying to forget that it snowed last March. However, it is great to be working with the soil again. Whether it is weeding the Chamomile lawn, pulling up grass or pruning back roses, the joy is in the here and now. Nothing beats it. We smile, we laugh and know that the plants will flower as spring comes along no matter what we do.

See you soon.

The Hengistbury Head Gardeners.