

RED KING OF THE SKY by Connor Betteridge-Hanson

The Red Kite Bird glides like a king of the sky. The great majestic bird glides over the evergreen trees, eager to get mice, this great bird floats gracefully in the sky, he is balanced while gliding silently. His beak is like a sharp razor and his claws are like a T-rex with his chest covered in red brown feathers. At the edge of the forest there was a family of four. They were watching the Red Kite Bird gliding waiting for its food to skip through the field.

A family of mice was skipping through the field with their long tails, cute eyes, squeaky voices, and short brown fur. With the Red Kite Bird swooshing and swooping with his eager eyes looking straight into the mice eyes he took a dive and with his talons he grabbed a baby pup. When he grabbed the mouse, he tried to go for another one, but he was too slow. He had the baby mouse; his little tail was flapping in the wind whilst the Red Kite Bird flew higher and higher to the sky. The family watched in amazement at the Red Kite Bird hunting for his prey. The little boy shouted "Run mice run" he desperately wanted the mice to escape their death. The mice began to scurry in a hole to be safe from the predator. Once they made it safely inside they trembled as they saw the Red Kite was using his sharp claws to dig to go to the mice, but the mice were too far in the hole. The Bird of prey took off because he did not want to lose his pup. He flew away from the hole to munch on his lunch. The mice were looking into the distance at the Bird of prey munching on its snack but the mouse broke free and it fell out of his claws... the mouse was falling like it was rolling down the hill he went down and down and down he went on top of the bush when he finally dropped he scampered to his mice family. The Red Kite Bird was angry because he lost his snack. The furious bird went zooming down for another tasty snack.

The family were enjoying a walk into the woods when the dad spotted a bird. They did not know what kind of bird it was, so they took a picture to find out what it was, they spotted colours and they knew it was the rare Red Kite Bird. They were excited to see the King of the sky. The family saw a tiny black ball falling from the sky the little boy said to his mum "should we catch it" his mum said no because it was falling from the tree. The little boy went running to the tree, but his mum stopped him when the mouse fell from the tree it bounced into the bush and ran away into the burrow where the other mice were safely hiding.

In the distance the little boy saw the grass moving, all of a sudden, the dad of the family spotted a long pink tail sticking out of the bush. They looked up above and the Red Kite Bird spotted it too. The Red Kite Bird went zooming down to the bush but he went too fast and crashed into the bush with his long majestic wings and splat. The Red Kite Bird, still dazed, flew up, up into the sky to hunt for more food. The Red Kite Bird glides like a king of the sky.
