

The Beauty of the Rain by Charlotte Parkin

So, let us stand in the rain,
Let it wash away our sins,
Until we are all forgiven
And new chances given.

So, let us fall in love with how the rains falls to the earth,
Endlessly and with reckless abandon,
Let it flood the veins of these fatigued roads
Washing out the impurities.

See the beauty of a single raindrop,
Watch it cleanse the earth.
Let it nourish till growth
Creating something new,
Beauty even when it appears like the sky is crying.

So, let us dance in the rain,
Running through our hair
Let it fall from our rose-coloured cheeks
And down the spines of our backs.
Creating a pool of blue and silver on the pavement.
A reflection of beauty and love staring back at us.
